CONTEXT

Administrative history:
In 1905 the Scotch Education Department recommended that Provincial Committees and four city training centres be established for the training of teachers. Following this recommendation the Free Church of Scotland Normal School merged with the Church of Scotland Normal School, under the aegis of the Edinburgh Provincial Committee for the Training of Teachers in 1907 to become the Edinburgh Provincial Training Centre at Moray House. In 1959 the College became Moray House College of Education. Some of the records series overlap into this collection.

Custodial history: Records were identified and listed as part of the 1995-1999 Non-Formula Funding Scottish Higher Education Funding Council specialised research collections in the Humanities.

Bundle of Correspondence

Letters from National Trust for Scotland suggesting that the Summer house be transferred to the Trust for preservation; memorandum on its history, confirmation of Moray House ownership, details of location. Trust and College are keen. Provincial Edinburgh Committee were disposed to recommend that the Trust took over the Summer, but that they would only recommend this to the National Committee for the Training of Teachers. However, in 1939 to 1941 negotiations stop at the outbreak of war. Enquiries as to location of house. Contact is made again in May 1941 when the state of the Summer House causes concern. Correspondence re the moving of the Summer House during alterations to the College, 3 June 1942. Photos taken in 1952 of the deteriorating, yet modern, heraldic supporters. July 1942. National Committee defer consideration of transfer. Matter is dropped when it is realised that the House is no longer in its original position, and that it is movable. It is no longer worth transferring deed of title of land.
